

The Mayors Compact & How it undermines American Freedoms

Written By Ron Brantsner on Nov 27, 2018

The Mayors' Compact fighting hate and bigotry is a grassroots initiative created by The Anti-Defamation League to combat intolerance or animus feelings toward Muslims and Jews. The Compact has strong language toward hate and bigotry, which is protected under the US Constitution. The compact reaches outside its boundaries to include hate speech, which violates the First Amendment of free speech.

Over 300 mayors nationally signed onto this agreement between the United States Conference of Mayors and the Anti-Defamation League to stop hate and bigotry against Muslims, Jews and minorities but fails to mention Christian. The agreement addresses hate groups, primarily white supremacists, after the protest in Charlottesville, Virginia where a woman was savagely ran over by a driver in a car.

The Mayors' Compact is riding the shirt tails of United Nations Res. 16/18 blasphemy laws toward Muslims. The United States Constitution became an obstacle in the advancement of UN Res. 16/18 and the International Human Rights Commission when Hillary Clinton tried to implement blasphemy laws in the United States by the advice of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC).

In 2011, Hillary Clinton met with the OIC secretary general in a three-day closed door meeting to express her concerns toward international blasphemy laws and American laws. Clinton caved and proceeded to advance the UN agenda 16/18 onto the United States.
